

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASEICOR Partners Selected by Consulting Magazine as a “2007 Small Jewel”

Arlington Virginia-based firm is selected as one of seven international consulting firms to receive the prestigious ‘2007 Small Jewels’ award by the consulting industry’s flagship publication

Arlington, VA. (March 5, 2007) — ICOR Partners, LLC, a public-sector strategy, transformation and business improvement consulting firm, has been named one of the industry’s leading small-sized management consulting firms by Consulting Magazine. The consulting industry’s flagship publication has selected ICOR Partners for the “2007 Small Jewel” award, recognizing ICOR’s excellence in client impact, internal operations and thought leadership.

Small Jewel is a designation Consulting Magazine annually bestows upon seven international firms, of 200 employees or less, that have distinguished themselves inside the consulting marketplace. Of the seven awardees, ICOR was the only firm that specialized in serving clients in the public sector and federal government markets. All seven ‘Small Jewels’ awardees will be profiled in Consulting Magazine’s March/April print issue and featured on the magazine’s web site at <http://www.consultingmag.com>

“Our goal has always been to be the trusted advisors that help our clients with their most important challenges. In the public sector, those challenges often have implications to millions of people around the country and around the world.” stated Wayne Simmons, ICOR’s founder and Managing Partner. “This prestigious award is a tribute to our clients for taking a different path and trusting a relatively new firm like ours with those tough issues. This recognition is also a tribute to the people of ICOR, who consistently deliver the fresh perspectives and new ideas that our clients have come to depend on”.
